

Population Economics

Volume 27 · Number 1 · January 2014

LEAD ARTICLE

Do more-schooled women have fewer children and delay childbearing? Evidence from a sample of US twins

V. Amin · J.R. Behrman 1

FERTILITY

Empirically probing the quantity–quality model

E. Fitzsimons · B. Malde 33

FAMILY

How important is the family? Evidence from sibling correlations in permanent earnings in the USA, Germany, and Denmark

D.D. Schnitzlein 69

Intergenerational earnings mobility in Japan among sons and daughters: levels and trends

A. Lefranc · F. Ojima · T. Yoshida 91

MIGRATION

Has immigration affected Spanish presidential elections results?

I. Mendez · I.M. Cutillas 135

Immigrant assimilation into US prisons, 1900–1930

C.M. Moehling · A.M. Piehl 173

Legal and illegal immigrants: an analysis of optimal saving behavior

A. Vinogradova 201

Ethnic identity, majority norms, and the native–immigrant employment gap

C. Gorinas 225

TAXATION

Population aging and PAYG pensions in the OLG model

G.P. Cipriani 251

Effects of capital taxation on economies with different demographic changes: short term versus long term

A. Yakita 257

ESPE REPORT

Twenty-seventh annual conference of the European society for population economics, Aarhus, 2013 275

