American government
A useful debate has begun about the size of the state, but it is comically shallow: leader, page 8. Cutting spending would be hard for a President Romney, page 33. How privatisation can help, page 34. Useless Dodd-Frank, page 56. What would Milton Friedman do now? Free exchange, page 60

Special report: Judaism The faith is enjoying a revival, but there are deep religious and political divisions, after page 38. Israel needs to solve a problem with its most religious Jews: leader, page 10. What would happen to Hebron under a two-state solution? Page 31

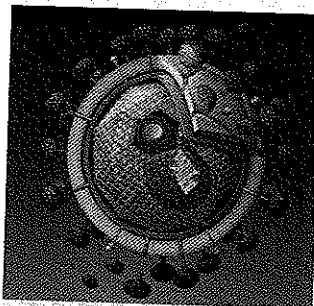

India A looming drought is manageable, but long-term changes to the monsoon might be catastrophic, page 41. Meanwhile Beijing battles with floods, page 46

Apple in China The Silicon Valley firm doesn't just make stuff there; its sales are booming, too, page 49. China's energy giant pushes overseas, in search of expertise more than oil, page 50

AIDS The disease is on the run. The world should make sure it goes on retreating: leader, page 11. Now that the means exist to bring AIDS under control, attention is turning towards a cure, page 61
