

On the cover
A nagging doubt is eating away at the world order: leader, page 9. America is no longer as alarming to its foes or reassuring to its friends, page 37. No other country comes close to its hard power, page 39. Western sanctions have little effect on Vladimir Putin's meddling in Ukraine, page 23. NATO's dilemma: Charlemagne, page 26

Next week

We publish a special report on shadow banking. As banks retreat in the wake of the financial crisis, "shadow banks" are taking on a growing share of their business, says Edward McBride. Will that make finance safer?
