

On the cover
 Although economies around Europe may be on the mend, voters' disillusion could cause a new crisis: leader, page 9. European elections will neither lend new credibility to the European Parliament nor give the EU greater democratic legitimacy, pages 18-20. New Europe is as divided about Russia as old Europe: Charlemagne, page 24. Two books on Europe's problems, page 73, and one on Britain's membership of the EU, page 74
