Europe's far right Extremist parties are no longer a fringe: leader, page 12. The far right lost in Austria, but it is a growing force in Europe, page 24. The migrant crisis in Europe last year was only one part of a worldwide problem. The rich world must get better at managing refugees. See our special report after page 40

Voting rules America's electoral laws are a recipe for chaos in November: leader, page 13. Today's voting-rights disputes are less clear-cut than those of the civil-rights era, but they are inflammatory all the same, page 35. Compulsory voting is hardest to enact in the places where it would make most difference: Free exchange, page 64

Who's in charge in Iran? The supreme leader is clipping the wings of the reformist president, page 31
