North Korea The world should hope, and plan, for regime change in North Korea; leader, page 8. It seems unlikely that Kim Jong Un will want to reform North Korea, but even less likely that the regime can go on resisting change, pages 15-17. Kim Jong Il: obituary, page 70

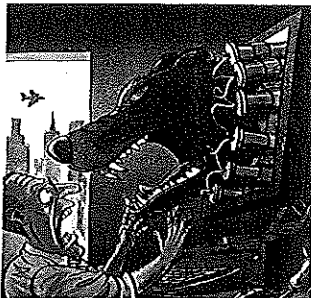

Religion and violence The world's most widely followed faith is thriving, but it is also battling persecution; leader, page 9. In some quarters, study of the Koran is getting increasingly daring, page 42. The departure of American troops from Iraq has already been followed by a resurgence of sectarian hatred, page 30

Vaclav Havel The unassuming man who taught, through plays and politics, how tyranny may be defied and overcome, pages 23-25
