reflexiones sobre el papel del archivo en la Web

"La biblioteca está en la nube... equivocada"

Biblioblog, 11/05/2010

Como institución y como profesionales necesitamos comprender que estamos en la era de las pantallas y de la nube.

A pesar de que llevamos años madurando en la red todavía identificamos la pantalla con ese "remedo del papel" y la información con nuestro fondo.

Sabemos que hay que estar en la red pero no interiorizamos que (también) debemos ser en la red.

The background of the slide is a close-up, slightly blurred image of a document with handwritten text in cursive. The ink is dark, and the paper has a light, aged tone. The text is slanted and fills most of the frame, with some words like 'another' and 'will' being partially legible. A semi-transparent light blue rectangular box with rounded corners is centered over the text, containing the main title.

Why records matter

Records are an essential tool of good business and for efficient administration. They provide:

- information for planning and decision-making
- evidence of government accountability and are often subject to specific legal requirements.

For government agencies, records document what is done and why. They provide evidence of communications, decisions and actions.

In the long term, some of the records your agency makes will be retained as national archives and so become part of Australia's documentary heritage.

This could certainly be in Paris and I think the soldiers could be cuirassiers.

I think the title should probably read: "Beaudemoulin, King of Spain, Poincaré" as général de brigade Antoine Beaudemoulin (1857-1927) was the head of the president's military staff (secrétaire général de la Présidence et chef de la Maison Militaire du Président de la République). He was certainly present during the visit of Alfonso XIII.

Thanks swanq - I forgot to add the link to the source. Incidentally, the escort aren't cuirassiers, as they are not wearing the cuirass. The white cuff patch and the fact that the rear soldier appears to be holding a lance suggests that they could be dragoons.

París, 7 de mayo.- El rey Alfonso de España llegó a París esta mañana, para una visita de tres días al Presidente Poincaré. Él y el Conde de Romanones, presidente del gobierno español, fueron conducidos en un carruaje de cuatro caballos, escoltados por coraceros. La ruta fue densamente cubierta por tropas, y tras ellas se amontonaba una amplia multitud de parisinos que aclamaba al Rey vigorosamente.

En escasos intervalos, grupos de revolucionarios profirieron gritos de “¡Viva Ferrer!” [Francesc Ferrer i Guàrdia, fusilado en 1909] al paso del carruaje...

PARIS, May 7.—King Alfonso of Spain arrived in Paris this morning on a three days' visit to President Poincaré. He and Count Romanones, the Spanish Premier, drove from the station with the President in a four-horse carriage, escorted by cuirassiers. The route was densely lined with troops, and behind them were massed large crowds of Parisians, who cheered the King vigorously.

At rare intervals groups of revolutionaries raised cries of “Vive Ferrer!” as the carriage passed. So indignant was the crowd that it handled some of the demonstrators severely, and some bricklayers, at work on a new building in the Champs Elysées, who hooted a little, were forced to stay on their scaffolding all day, going without dinner because

The "American Intervention in Northern Russia, 1918-1919," nicknamed the "Polar Bear Expedition," was a U.S. military intervention in northern Russia at the end of World War I. Since many of these soldiers originated from Michigan, the Bentley Historical Library at the University of Michigan, an archive documenting Michigan history, has collected materials related to this event since the 1960s. The Bentley has amassed one of the largest groups of materials on this topic, consisting of over sixty individual collections of primary source material as well as numerous published materials.

In 2004, the Bentley proposed a project to digitize all of the Polar Bear materials in order to increase access as well as protect and secure the fragile originals. In 2005, faculty and students from the University of Michigan School of Information began a research project investigating next generation finding aids. The Polar Bear Expedition Digital Collections are the first example of rethinking traditional archival finding aids to provide better access to primary sources on the web. We are experimenting with different ideas for displaying archival content as well as implementing added functions so that researchers can interact with online collections using collaborative tools. (read more...)

There are several ways to begin your own expedition into the Polar Bear Collections:

- read a brief history of the Polar Bear Expedition.
- search for items about a person, place or Army unit
- browse lists of photographs, maps or diaries from the Collections
- browse an alphabetical list of collections, most of which bear an individual's name
- browse a list of all known participants of the Polar Bear Expedition
- look for information related to a specific geographic location
